Solution:

Activity Feed in user's Microsoft Teams is where they can keep track all of their Teams' important news or messages and their activities such as their recent likes or replies. It serves a summary of everything that has happened in the channels that are in user's teams list. If they have too much information in their activity feed, they can filter it according to the type of notifications they want to see.

Details:

User can select Activity to see their Activity feed -- a summary of everything that's happened in the teams and channels they follow.

To filter activity, advise user to:

Under Activity, select Filter.Type to filter by a keyword or select More options (...) and choose how to filter their feed. They can filter by:

Unread messagesMentionsRepliesReactionsMissed callVoicemailAppsSuggested

Select the X next to a filter to clear it.When they're done, user must select Close filter to close it completely.

To view activity, advise user to:

Under Activity, select the Feed dropdown arrow and choose My Activity to see just user's activity.
